

One Mother's Experience

The ConnectEdPAIRS Getaway Weekend gift certificate came at a good time for my daughter and son-in-law.

After 10 years of marriage and two children I can not say the fire went out of their relationship - just that it manifested itself as a burning anger fueled by unresolved disappointments.

...they were involved in marriage counseling but they really needed something more intensive than one hour a week. I figured the week-end retreat cost was minuscule compared to the cost of a divorce or the irreparable damage to my grandchildren.

Nine months have past since they spent the week-end with Marilyn and Matt. No, it is not bliss but I hear words spoken to each other I have not heard in many, many years.

- "I love you"

- "That's because we are so different when it comes to..."

- "That's her strength and my weakness"

- "We are working on that."

Music to my ears, joy to my heart.

I think a retreat once a year for a couple you care about makes a lovely birthday, anniversary, Christmas, Valentine, or simple a I Love You gift.

It's an excellent investment in someone you love.

What people had to say after our last Weekend Getaway

- ♥ "(Matt and Marilyn) truly believe what they talk about and use the program in their own lives."
- ♥ ""(Matt and Marilyn) are very professional, easy to talk to, and knowledgeable"
- ♥ "Sharing their personal experiences and examples was helpful. They were also patient and never pushy."
- ♥ "I think the tools we learned will help us to get through tough issues with more understanding and less hurt feelings."
